News From Domestic Programs

Happy New Year to returned Peace Corps Volunteers around the world. For those of you with questions about the Office of Domestic Programs at the Peace Corps, the following article serves three purposes: 1) to introduce the new director of the Office of Domestic Programs, 2) to acquaint RPCVs with Domestic Programs' latest projects and services, and 3) to highlight the need for RPCV involvement in the Peace Corps' third goal activities.

New Leadership

In August 2002, Allene Zanger was appointed to serve as the director of the Peace Corps' Office of Domestic Programs. Prior to this appointment, she served as the director of School-Community Partnerships in the Office of the Kern County Superintendent of Schools in Bakersfield, California, where she helped school districts and community partners design and implement learning support programs. In addition, she was the program director for the Central Valley Communities for Children AmeriCorps program, which she started in 1995.

From 1993 to 1995, Zanger was an environmental education Peace Corps Volunteer in Panama. Before joining the Peace Corps, she was general counsel, vice president of public affairs, and corporate secretary for Tejon Ranch Company in Lebec, California. Previous to that, she served as a deputy attorney general in the California Attorney General's Office. Zanger earned a B.A. in political science from the University of the Pacific in Stockton, California, and a J.D. from Hastings College of the Law in San Francisco.

Peace Corps Day in February

It's not too late to sign up to participate in Peace Corps Day on February 28, 2003. Thousands of returned Volunteers will celebrate the Peace Corps' birthday by sharing the knowledge and insights gained from their overseas experiences with their communities. As you know, part of the Peace Corps' mission is to educate Americans back home about the people with whom Volunteers have lived and worked. When you share your Peace Corps experiences, you enrich the lives of students, neighbors, and colleagues. You also raise awareness of Volunteers' ongoing global contributions and plant the seeds of service in the minds of future recruits.

Peace Corps Day also serves to make communities aware of the abundance of educational and other resources available to them throughout the year from the Peace Corps and RPCV groups. Each year on Peace Corps Day, the Office of Domestic Programs coordinates phone calls between Volunteers and U.S. classrooms linked through the Paul D. Coverdell World Wise Schools Correspondence Match program. Educators apply to participate in the calls and are selected based on their plans to use the call in the context of their global education curriculum.

In addition, Volunteers and overseas posts are encouraged to celebrate the day in activities that share American culture with their host communities. If you are interested in participating in Peace Corps Day 2003, see the announcement on page eight for contact information.

Updates From Paul D. Coverdell World Wise Schools

Teachers and those considering a career in teaching can find a treasure-trove of resources through the Peace Corps' Coverdell World Wise Schools program, among them the Correspondence Match and CyberVolunteer programs, publications on cross-cultural issues, and the Coverdell Award for Excellence in Teaching.

Match Program. When former Peace Corps Director Paul D. Coverdell launched World Wise Schools as a domestic program in 1989, he envisioned a broad network of Peace Corps Volunteers communicating their experiences to classrooms around the United States. That vision is being kept alive today with some 5,000 Volunteers in the field e-mailing, writing, and calling classrooms in every state and the District of Columbia.

Many of you have participated in this program as Volunteers, and you can continue your involvement by wearing the shoe on the other foot as teachers, as hundreds of other RPCVs are already doing. If you work or plan to work in a classroom, consider joining the match program. An enrollment form is available online at www.peacecorps.gov/wws, or you can e-mail the program at wwsinfo@peacecorps.gov.

Publications. If you are looking for activities to help students become more culturally aware and socially tolerant, look no further than our newest publication, Building Bridges: A Peace Corps Classroom Guide to Cross-Cultural Understanding. This softcover booklet of 13 lessons for grades 6 through 12 is available free and can also be downloaded from www.peacecorps.gov/wws/bridges/index.html. Building Bridges was published in partnership with the National Geographic Society Education Foundation.

In addition, we offer Voices From the Field: Reading and Writing About the World, Ourselves, and Others, a language arts curriculum based upon writings by RPCVs. Voices is also avail-

Fellows Program Expansion

Peace Corps Fellows/USA continues to expand its offerings into new subject areas and locations. Recent additions to the list of partner universities are Carnegie Mellon University in Pittsburgh, the University of Denver, Michigan Technological University in Houghton, and the University of Wisconsin at Milwaukee.

This means that you can now choose from 32 universities across the United States for reduced-cost graduate study as a Peace Corps Fellow. At the same time, you complete an internship related to your studies in an underserved U.S. community using the language, cross-cultural, and technical skills you acquired while working overseas. Internships include teaching in settings as diverse as Miami, inner-city New York, and a Native American reservation; working with nonprofits that influence public policy on watershed issues; helping clean up hazardous materials at brownfield sites; working on housing, employment, and other community development issues; helping combat hunger, homelessness, and domestic abuse; helping at-risk youth and seniors; working in clinics that provide free health care to low-income families; and helping women start small businesses.

RPCVs benefit from lifetime eligibility for Fellows/USA programs, which offer degrees in a wide array of fields such as business, community and economic development, environmental studies, nursing, public health, and teaching. For more information, visit www.peacecorps.gov/fellows, e-mail fellows@peacecorps.gov, or call 800.424.8580, extension 1434.

Career Information for RPCVs

Career Manuals. Returned Volunteer Services (RVS) has published the annual updated edition of the Career Information Consultants, which RPCVs can order free by sending their name and address to the e-mail address below. Over 1,400 consultants are included in the new 340-page directory, and for the first time, a CD-ROM version of the publication is also available.

Career consultants are professionals in specific fields (including RPCVs) who have agreed to answer career-related inquiries on a voluntary basis. Their fields include agriculture, environmental science, business, communications, education, and government.

RVS will begin collecting information in February for the 2003 edition, which is scheduled to be published next fall. Additionally, RVS plans to publish new online editions of two other career manuals in 2003, Environmental Careers and Careers in Agriculture.

Career Centers. In December, the RPCV Career Center at Peace Corps headquarters moved to its new location at 1525 Wilson Boulevard in Arlington, Virginia, where it shares space with the Rosslyn Recruiting Office. Note that effective January 6, 2003, only RPCVs who are within one year of their close of service will be able to use Peace Corps career centers. You can obtain a career center application form from RVS or the Rosslyn Recruiting Office.

Early this year, each of the Peace Corps' 11 regional offices will have a career center equipped with computers and other resources. As the demand for such career services grows, more equipment and materials will be added.

RVS continues to sponsor career and job search events. For example, monthly brown bag sessions at headquarters feature speakers on a wide range of issues related to employment and career transitions. See the announcement on the back page of this Hotline issue for information about the next brown bag on January 22, 2003.

The biannual career fairs hosted by RVS in Washington, D.C., in February and September continue to grow in popularity. For each fair, we invite more than 20 employers interested in hiring RPCVs, selecting them to reflect the diversity of the RPCV community and its career interests. The next fair will take place on February 26. Visit www.peacecorps.gov/rpcv/career/events.cfm for information about upcoming career events.

RVS plans to reevaluate its programming to see how it can expand career services on a national level to reach RPCVs who are not able to attend brown bags and career fairs in Washington. Stay tuned to upcoming issues of Hotline for more information. For questions about RVS programs and services and to order publications, send an e-mail to rvs@peacecorps.gov or call 202.692.1430.

Staying Connected

The Peace Corps cares about staying in contact with you and other returned Volunteers. Please help us keep in touch by visiting www.peacecorps.gov/rpcv/records/update.cfm to update your contact information online. Or send a note to the RPCV Database Manager, Office of Domestic Programs, 1111 20th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20526.

A final note: RPCV certificates of service are expected to resume printing shortly, and we thank those of you who have been waiting these past months for your patience.

For general information about Domestic Programs, call 202.692.1420 or e-mail dpinfo@peacecorps.gov.
